The troops of the first airborne army in the Arnhem area, further reinforced by troops and supplies dropped in the past 24 hours, battled valiantly against the Germans.
The corridor slashed through Holland northward from Eindhoven to north of Nijmegen now has been extended to a length of 40 miles and is 25 miles wide at its base, headquarters said.

"Dragon Seed" To Be Attraction at Grand

From the same studio that gave you "The Good Earth," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Mrs. Miniver" and "Random Harvest" comes another outstanding film. This one is called "Dragon Seed," and it is based on the celebrated novel by Pearl Buck, author also of "The Good Earth."

It must be said immediately that "Dragon Seed" is a great picture, an outstanding production measured by any standards in the great tradition of Hollywood.

"Dragon Seed," which opens Sunday at the Grand Theatre, is a story of China and of the valiant Chinese people. It is a sweeping, epic story of their struggles against the marauding Japanese invaders, of a peaceful people who have shown that they know how to fight for the country and their lives against the most tremendous odds in history.

It is also a story of love and devotion, with Katharine Hepburn, following her triumphs in "Woman of the Year" and "The Philadelphia Story," revealing her great versatility in the role of Jade, Walter Huston plays Ling Tan, head of the house of Ling, and other roles are dramatically and superbly played by such outstanding performers as Aline MacMahon, Akim Tamiroff, Turhan Bey, Hurd Hatfield and many, many others.

Filmed on the same grand scale as "The Good Earth," the present film is even more far-reaching and powerful in its effect. It has been magnificently directed by Jack Conway and Harold S. Bucquet and richly produced by Pandro S. Berman.

"Dragon Seed" is one of those pictures which comes along too seldom, a production that proves that Hollywood is capable of the greatest kind of art that is at once the greatest kind of entertainment. Every man, woman and child will find in "Dragon Seed" the picture about our Chinese friends and allies that he or she has been waiting for.

"Dragon Seed" is a "must see" picture.

SWORDS FOR FARMS

Beating swords into plowshares after this war is going to be a far more complicated process than usual, but the plowshares fashioned from swords promise to be applicable to a wide variety of agricultural chores.

In going over the surplus materials that will be available, the Department of Agriculture believes that Army snipe generators for screening offensive and defensive maneuvers can be used for the volume spraying of insecticides in days of peace, thus saving large crop areas.

In war, strips of metal grill-work are used for rapid construction of airfields. These could be placed on hillsides to conquer field erosion. In very cold climates the Army has been using specially designed machines to pre-heat engines. It is suggested these could be employed drying hay in barns when weather is too moist for field drying. These gadgets are in addition to the jeeps, light trucks and other machinery of war that might be turned over to agriculture. Why shouldn't tankdozers be applied to a variety of farm jobs, including contouring?

Some persons have advocated destroying the war surplus so that factories can keep workers busy making more. But destruction of that which is usable is ever frowned upon by sane men. Whatever the farmer can use out of the vast amount of machinery and goods produced to defeat Germany and Japan should be made available to him.

TO GERMANY'S VITALS

General Patton's Army seems to have encountered the toughest going in penetrating Germany, which may be attributable to the circumstances that Patton won the highest reputation as an offensive general in the French campaigns. The Germans may be concentrating unusually heavy forces to delay Patton.

But this is not the whole story. Patton is pointed toward a part of Germany that is vital to the Nazi capacity to carry on war for even the shortest period of time. Two-thirds of all German coal supplies are in the Ruhr Basin, the Rhineland and the Saar Basin. Patton's drive toward the Saar Basin may already have brought production there to a standstill. General Hodges, coming in through Aachen, also is in coal producing country. Beyond the two armies lies the Ruhr Basin which contains 60 per cent of German coal.

Having lost most of its oil supply, Germany cannot survive longer than a few days or weeks of occupation of its sources of coal. Possession by the Allies of Germany's coal resources would take everything up in the Reich, with cold weather already on the scene.

One thing certain is that a great many automobile tires have lasted longer than anybody believed possible.

No matter how cold the weather, the Germans will be sitting on a hot spot.

"CALAMITY TOWN" by ELLERY QUEEN

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

"It's getting worse," reported Pat to Ellery. "Jim's drinking himself stupid. Even Lola can't do anything with him. Ellery, is it just that he's scared?"

"He's not scared at all. Goes deeper than funk, Patty. Hasn't he seen Nora yet?"

"He's ashamed to see her. Nora's threatening to get out of bed and go over there herself, only Dr. Willoughby said if she did he'd send her to the hospital. I slept with her last night. She cried all night."

Ellery remarked glumly, "Nora still thinks he's innocent?"

"Of course. She wants him to fight back. She says if he'd only come over to see her, she knows she could persuade him to stand up and defend himself from these attacks. Did you see what those reporters are writing about Jim now?"

"Yes," sighed Ellery. "It's all Frank Lloyd's fault! Pop's so furious he says he'll never speak to Frank again."

"It's better to keep out of Lloyd's way," said Ellery with a frown. "He's thoroughly aroused."

Then Pat burst out: "How can people be so mean? Mom's friends they don't call her any more. They're whispering ugly things behind her back, she's being snubbed by two of her organizations—even Clarice Martin's stopped calling!"

"The Judge's wife," murmured Ellery. "Which suggests another interesting problem. . . Have you seen Carter Bradford lately?"

"No," answered Pat. Then the author-detective swiftly changed tack. "Patty, what do you know about Roberta Roberts?"

"A good reporter, I'd say!"

"Strange what different conclusions she draws from the same facts. Did you see this?" Ellery showed Pat a Chicago newspaper, flipped back to Roberta's Column. A paragraph had been ringed, and Pat read it quickly:

The longer I investigate this case, the surer I feel that James Haight is a misunderstood man, a martyr to what is at best a circumstantial case and a victim of mobism. The woman he is alleged by gossip to have tried to poison is standing by her husband four-square, with never a doubt. More power to you, Nora Wright Haight! If faith and love still mean anything in this wretched world, your husband's name will be cleared and you will triumph over the pack.

"That's a deserved tribute!" cried Pat.

"A little emotional, even for a famous entrepreneur of love," remarked Mr. Queen dryly. "I think I'll cultivate this female Cupid."

"But that only confirmed his first impression. Roberta Roberts was heart and soul behind the struggle to get Jim a just hearing. Roberta had one talk with Nora, and they became fighters in a common cause."

"If you could only get Jim to come up here," said Nora urgently. "Don't you try, Miss Roberts?"

"He'd listen to you," Pat interposed.

But Jim refused to stir from the house.

"Why, Jim?" asked the newspaper woman patiently. Ellery was present, and Lola Wright.

"Lemme alone," Jim had not shaved; under the stubble his skin was gray.

"You can't just lie around the house and let these people spit on you, Jim! See Nora. She'll give you strength, Jim. She's ill—don't you know that? Don't you care?"

Haight turned a tortured face to the wall. "Nora's in good hands. Her family's taking care of her. And I've done her enough harm already. Lemme alone!"

"But Nora believes in you."

"I'm not gonna see Nora till this is all over," he muttered. "Till I'm Jim Haight again in this town, not some hated hyena."

And not all of Roberta's prodding could rouse him.

When Roberta had gone, and Jim was asleep, Ellery said to Lola Wright: "And what's your angle, my dear Spinks?"

"No angle. Somebody has to take care of Jim. I feed him and put him to bed."

"You haven't expressed any opinion, Lola."

"There's been too much expression of opinion," she retorted. "But if you want to know, I'm a professional underdog-lover. I see Jim suffering, and that's enough for me."

"Apparently it's enough for Roberta Roberts, too," mumbled Ellery.

"Miss Love-Conquers-All?" Lola shrugged. "If you ask me, that dame's on Jim's side so she can get in where the other reporters can't!"

Considering that Nora was bed-ridden as a result of arsenic poisoning, that John F. was finding his cronies transferring their business to Hallam Luck's Public Trust Co., that Hermione was having the lady-finger put on her, Pat was sticking close to Nora's bedside, and even Lola had been jolted out of her isolation considering all this, it was wonderful how the Wrights kept bravely pretending, even among themselves, that nothing out of the ordinary had happened.

No one referred to Nora's condition except as an "illness." John F. talked business at his desk in his old dry way—if he attended far fewer board meetings it was because he was "tired up" . . . obviously; and the fact that he disappeared from the weekly luncheons of the Chamber of Commerce was excused on grounds of dyspepsia.

As for Jim—he was not mentioned at all.

But Hermione, after the first emotional storms, did some calking and sail patching. No one was going to run her out of town, and grimly she began to employ her telephone again. At her Women's Club, Madam President astounded everyone by making a personal appearance, in her smartest winter suit, acting as if nothing had happened whatsoever. The ladies grew scarlet under the lash of Hermione's scorn. And at home she took charge as of old. Ludie went about with a relieved expression.

By the beginning of February things took on such an air of normalcy that Lola actually returned to her flat in Low Village and Pat assumed the task of cooking Jim's meals and straightening Nora's house.

On February 13th, Dr. Willoughby said that Nora could get out of bed. There was much joy in the household. Ludie baked a gargantuan lemon-meringue pie, Nora's favorite; John F. came home early from the bank—a double armful of roses, which he got them, in Wrightsville, in February, he refused to say. Pat stretched as if she were crampy, and then washed her hair and her nails, musing things like, "My, how I've let myself go!" Hermione turned the radio on for the first time in weeks. . . It was like coming out of a restless sleep to find yourself safely awake.

Nora wanted to see Jim instantly; but Hermione refused to let her out of the house—"The first day, dear! Are you insane?"—and so Nora phoned next door. After a while she hung up, helplessly; there was no answer.

"Maybe he's gone out for a walk," said Pat.

"I'm sure that's what it is, Nora," agreed Hermione, fussing over Nora's hair. "Hermione did not say that Jim was in the house that very moment—she had just glimpsed his gray face pressed against the Venetian blinds of the master bedroom."

"I know!" exclaimed Nora, and she telephoned Ben Danzig. "Mr. Danzig, send me the biggest, most expensive Valentine you've got. Right away!"

"Yes, ma'am," said Ben; and in a half hour it was all over town that Nora Haight was all right again. Sending Valentines. Is there another man, do you suppose?

It was a gorgeous thing, quilted in pink satin and bordered with real lace, framing numerous fat Cupids and sweet with St. Valentine sentiment—Ben Danzig's most exclusive number!

Nora addressed the envelope herself, and sent Ellery out to mail it. She was almost gay.

The mail Friday morning there was no Valentine for Nora.

"I'm going over there," she said firmly. "Jim's sulking. He thinks the whole world's against him. I'm going."

Ludie came in, very stiff and scared, and said: "It's Chief Dakin and Mr. Bradford, Miss Hermione."

"Dakin?" The color left Hermione's cheeks. "For . . . me, Ludie?"

"Says he wants to be seeing Miss Nora."

John F. rose from the breakfast table. "I'll handle this!" They went into the living room.

Mr. Queen left his cigar and ran upstairs. Pat yawned "Whooz?" when he rapped on her door.

"Come downstairs!"

"Whaffor?" He heard her yawn again. "Come in, come in," Ellery merely opened the door. Pat was bunched under the bedclothes, looking rosy and mused.

"Dakin and Bradford. To see Nora. I think this is it!"

"Oh!" Panie. But only for a moment. "Throw me my robe, like a darling. It's Arctic in here!" Mr. Queen handed it to her, turned to walk out. "Wait for me in the hall, Ellery. I want to go downstairs with you."

Pat joined him shortly. As they came in, Chief Dakin was saying: "Course, Mrs. Haight, you understand I've got to cover the whole ground. I'd told Doc Willoughby to let me know when you'd be up and about."

"So kind of you," said Nora. She was frightened almost out of wits. You could see it.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

"Hello," saluted Pat. "Isn't it early for a call, Mr. Dakin?"

The Chief shrugged. Bradford regarded her with a furious misery. He seemed thinner, almost emaciated.

"I don't know what you can expect Nora to tell you," fenced John F. frigidly. "Patricia, sit down!"

"Patricia?" said Pat. She sat down. "Patricia" was a bad sign. John F. hadn't called her Patricia in such a formal voice since the last time he'd used his old-fashioned razor stop on her, and that had been many many years ago. She did not look at Bradford once; and after that first unhappy glance, he did not look at her.

Dakin nodded pleasantly to Ellery. "Glad to see you, Mr. Smith. Now if we'll all set—Cart, did you want to say something?"

"Yes!" exploded Cart. "I wanted to say that I'm in an impossible position. I wanted to say—"

He made a helpless gesture and stared out the window at the snow-covered lawn.

"Now, Mrs. Haight," said Dakin, blinking at Nora, "would you mind telling us just what happened New Year's Eve as you saw it? I've got everybody else's story."

"Mind? Why should I mind? It came out foggy, and Nora cleared her throat. And began to talk shrilly and rapidly. "But I can't really tell you anything. I mean, all that I saw—"

"When your husband came around to you with the tray of cocktails, didn't he sort of pick out one special glass for you? I mean, didn't you want to take one glass and he fixed it so you took another?"

"How can I remember a thing like that?" asked Nora indignantly. "A—that's a—naasty implication!"

"Mrs. Haight," The Chief's voice was suddenly chilly. "Did your husband ever try to poison you before New Year's Eve?"

State Trooper Testifies In Arson Case Now On Trial

Jury of ten women and two men before Judge Calvin S. Boyer. Today marks the third day of the trial.

The last witness called Wednesday afternoon before adjournment was Trooper Harry Christ, of Doylestown, Deputy Fire Marshal of the Pennsylvania State Police. He was on the stand for about 30 minutes under direct examination conducted by District Attorney Edward G. Biester and then turned over to defense attorney, Thomas Ross, Doylestown, for cross-examination. Court adjourned at that point until this morning.

Trooper Christ testified that he talked with Mrs. Ellicott on February 15, after interviewing other people in the vicinity of the fire and Milford firemen on February 9.

Christ testified that he discussed with the defendant, her financial condition and that she said that no repairs had been made to the apartment property recently. She also stated that she had been to the Upper Black Eddy apartment house a week before the fire and that she then found the place in good condition and everything intact. She told Trooper Christ that no rubbish of any kind was in the place then.

"The defendant further told me," Trooper Christ testified, "that she had been made executor of her father's estate and that her share, $4,300, had been invested in a farm near Milford, N. J., with a Mr. McEntee; that she had borrowed some help money from her son to help pay for the farm that she and McEntee bought for $12,000, and that she owed the Milford bank $1,200.

"Mrs. Ellicott further told me that her income consisted of $15 a month which she got as rent from another property at Upper Black Eddy near the scene of the fire, and $20 apiece per month from two places in New Jersey. She told me that her husband disappeared some years ago and that she had him declared dead.

"As to a jug containing a half-cup of kerosene, found in the apartment at the time of the first fire, Mrs. Ellicott could give no reason for it being there. She said there was nothing in the building when she last saw it a week before the fire, but that somebody might have broken into the place after that and left the jug there. She said no jug was in the building when she was there.

"The defendant told me she had increased her insurance on the apartment house, and I asked her why, and she told me that the place had been vacant and anything could happen, and that she valued the place at the amount of the insurance. She said that she held the building worth $4,000 and tried to sell it for that, and to two other parties for $3,500.

"Mrs. Ellicott told me that she talked with her brother, Frank Shoudt on October 18, 1943, and on February 11, 1944, about this particular fire."

At this point District Attorney Biester turned the witness over for cross-examination and court adjourned until yesterday.

Other witnesses included John C.

Cereal Menus and Combinations

By BETTY BARCLAY

More and more, in the home, on the train, at the club or in a cool hotel dining room, men and women are ordering cereal and fruit combinations for breakfast and lunch.

It's much different than in the old days when a bowl of cereal and cream at breakfast was about all the cereal we consumed that day. Now, we know cereals have much to offer — those with whole-grain nourishment are included in the Basic 7 — that daily pattern of basic foods for well-rounded meals. There are many delightful cereal combinations, that are a welcome change from our usual breakfast and luncheon menus.

Here are two cereal combinations for lunch — followed by two menus calling for the combinations given. These in turn are followed by two delicious and rather unusual recipes showing how cereals fit into daily menus, in other ways as well as at breakfast-time. For something new, try them and these delightful, healthful and satisfactory menus.

¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
6 tablespoons milk or water
½ cup Post Toasties, crushed
Beat eggs slightly, add salt, pepper, and milk, and mix well. Pour into greased skillet and cook slowly, stirring regularly across bottom of pan, until creamy. Add cereal and serve at once. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

Blueberry Bran Muffins
¾ cup milk
1 cup 40% Bran Flakes
1 cup sifted flour
¾ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, well beaten
3 tablespoons melted butter or other shortening
¾ cup blueberries
Pour milk over bran, let stand 5 minutes. Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and sugar, and sift again. Add egg and shortening to bran mixture and mix well. Add flour, beating only enough to dampen all flour. Fold in blueberries. Bake in greased muffin pans in hot oven (425° F.) 25 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

deMille, of Milford, N. J., paper mill superintendent, and first cousin of the world famous Cecil Blount deMille, playwright, actor and theatrical and motion picture producer.

John deMille, called by the Commonwealth, testified that he was formerly chief of the Milford (N. J.) Fire Company and that he as a "retired fireman" went to the scene of the Upper Black Eddy fire on February 6, following the fire company. He got there, he said, about 2:30 a. m. and helped fight the fire. He described what he saw and the interior layout of the building, where the inside of the wall on the first floor, on one end of the building was burned. He also said that he found some charred material at the base of a stairway on the first floor.

John Grier, special agent for the Hartford Fire Insurance Co., working out of the Philadelphia office, testified that he investigated the fire. He produced records of Mrs.

Ellicott's insurance policy on her Upper Black Eddy building showing that she had on Feb. 6, 1944, insurance amounting to $6200, of which $5,000 was on the apartment house and $1200 on the garage (which did not burn). Grier stated that on August 16, 1943, the defendant carried on the same property $3,000 on the apartment house and $1200 on the garage. He testified that the increase on the apartment building was made on Oct. 22, 1943, and that a vacancy clause on the building was in force for a period of six months. A motion by defense counsel that Grier's testimony be ruled out was denied by Judge Boyer.

Mrs. Emma Mathis, Upper Black Eddy, a teacher in the Deep Run school in Bedminster township, testified that she lived in No. 1 apartment in the defendant's building from Nov. 12, 1942, to May 11, 1943. She described the place in detail, reciting the lack of conveniences—cold water only, no stove, an electric pump that worked only 50 per cent of the time for pumping water. Mrs. Mathis stated that no arrangement was made for heating the apartment and that she had to bring her own stove. There were no toilets in the apartments, the witness stated; the toilets were in the outside garage. Mrs. Mathis testified that she paid $15 per month rent to the defendant.

Frank Jesolowski, of Upper Black Eddy, also testified that he lived in one of the other apartments in the defendant's building for about to discuss the entire problem with the council.

Authorization was given the shade tree commission to spend up to $500 planting new trees and removing dead wood.

Charles Young, chairman of the water works committee, reported tests for August were satisfactory. A communication from the State Highway Department informed the board that removal of the old trolley car rails on North Pennsylvania avenue could not be done at State expense.

Action was delayed on painting and papering Borough Hall and painting the bridge over the canal on North Pennsylvania avenue.

campaign ribbons to his credit, he's logged many a sea-mile, but would like to get back to Bristol and settle down again.

However, until the war is won, he'll continue to do his part as a fighting bluejacket in Uncle Sam's Navy—one of the Bristol McCahan's who are really doing their part for their country.

The other members of the McCahan family in addition to William, who are in the service, include the following: Cpl. John, who is in Italy and with the Army's anti-aircraft unit; Sgt. Henry, a paratrooper now in Georgia; Joseph is a pay clerk in the Navy and is stationed at Seattle, while Elizabeth is a petty officer, third class, in the WAVES and is at Indianhead, Md.

Mrs. McCahan is employed in war work at Rohm & Haas, while Mr. McCahan is employed at the Warner Sand Company near Morrisville, much of whose product contributes indirectly to the war effort. This gives this family a 100% war effort record.

may be but a few months or possibly a year. The two will reside at the school dormitories.

The Rev. Mr. Knetter will serve as pastor-evangelist in a section of western China, he being assigned upon arrival there as a district superintendent with 50 churches under his care. He will remain at each church for a period of two or three weeks at a time, helping to set up organization activities and Christian programs. The churches cover an area of about 400 miles. En route from one parish to another he will preach and endeavor to set up new Christian groups between the churches already established. Most of the travel will be afoot, or by donkey and bicycle.

The local clergyman served as pastor of the Methodist Church at Evansburg for two years prior to coming to Bristol. He is a graduate of Central high school, Philadelphia; Ursinus College, Collegeville; and has followed several years of study at the University of Pennsylvania in preparation for his life work. He graduated last May from Drew Theological Seminary.

witness until she was out of the room.

Among the character witnesses testifying for Mrs. Yorton were Mrs. Evelyn Parker, Mrs. Jane Geiges, Paul Roeger and Max Roeger, all of Andalusia.

In sentencing Mrs. Yorton, Judge Keller told her that he was giving her the benefit of having pleaded guilty and that he was taking into consideration her daughter and little granddaughter as well as the good reputation that she had held in the opinion of her acquaintances. The Judge laid particular stress on the situation existing today among the young wives of men in the armed services.

"There is a slang word for it," stated Judge Keller, "that exactly fits the situation, and that word is 'cheaters.' It is hard to have any sympathy with a 'cheater,' whether man or woman."

Mrs. Yorton was sentenced to an indeterminate term in the State Industrial Home for Women at Muncie.

"The new armor-piercing device was not easy to manufacture," said General Campbell, "as it is composed of several parts, each fitting the other within close tolerances." There were eight Philadelphia firms and one in Baltimore engaged on the project.

General Campbell and Mr. Ingersoll both stated that "without such earnest co-operation of the companies involved in the production job, the rapid advance of American troops in Normandy could not have been possible."

The American First Army column which pushed on below Aachen inside Germany was locked in fierce street fighting inside the town of Stolberg.

At the southern end of the western battlefield in France the Germans reinforced their troops guarding the approaches to the Siegfried Line with artillery, primarily in the Epinal area.

Allied forces at the Leopold Canal as yet had made no crossing. Mopping up proceeded between the canal and Antwerp.

HIGH SCHOOL COACH UNDECIDED AS TO LINEUP TONIGHT

Coach Stackhouse Sure Embessi Will Start at Right End

FARELL IS AT RIGHT

Foole and Lelinski, Tackles;
Oriola and McDevitt

Coach Harold L. Stackhouse who leads his Bristol High Bunnies against Trenton Catholic High tonight at Dunn Field, Trenton, is still undecided on whom to use in certain positions.

He is sure that Embessi will start at right end, while left end is a choice between Keyes or Favoroso. Dit tackles will be Foole and Lelinski; and the guards, Monachello and Costantini. "Mickey" Mandio will draw the nod for the center post.

Farrell is almost a certainty at right half, while left half is a toss-up between Oriola and McDevitt. At quarterback it will be either Fosse, Accardi or Capriotti. Coach Stackhouse has converted John Schanze from a lineman to a back, and will start him at the fullback position.

Sportsmen's Briefs

By JOE ELBERSON

Last fishing contest this year... On Sunday, September 24th, the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association will hold its annual sport fishing contest at Silver Lake. The contest will be open to everyone holding a Pennsylvania resident fishing license.

First prize is a five dollar sporting goods order. All catches will be eligible for entry except carp. The entire lake will be open for contestants. Members of the Association Fish Committee will conduct the contest which starts at 7 in the morning and ends at 9 in the evening. Last year, when the contest attracted almost two hundred participants, the contest was won by Harry Bossler with his bass entry.

Corporal Johnny Johnson, home on furlough from a South Carolina Army Camp, couldn't resist visiting one of his old fishing stretches, the Canal. He and some friends were working a section in Grandy's Park Sunday evening. Claimed they were after a big bass which they had seen earlier in the day. Not having heard to the contrary I am inclined to believe the big fellow is still free in his native haunts!

Better late than never... the weed cutting program at Silver Lake has been completed once again. Next year we hope the Fish Commission is successful in having the job done twice during the season. This will keep the growth from making the grounds look like a wilderness.

A fine catch... Joe Smith, Locust street, one of Bristol's most persistent fishermen, took 11 pickerel from the Canal one day last week. He used a spoon on his bait casting rod. Most of the fish ran about 14 inches, at-

Rail bird hunting still good... Maurice Delker and I hunted in the Florence Island section of the Delaware last Saturday afternoon. We had a bag of 15 birds, including two king rails. Met two other parties returning from the same section. One had 39 birds and the other 21. It was a very pleasant afternoon, warm enough to hunt in our shirt sleeves and do a little wading where we couldn't pole our boat. George Wetherill and I were up at the same spot Tuesday evening. Had about a half hour of shooting. Bagged eight in that time. George made a beautiful double shot, the birds dropping on open water about a foot apart. Flushed a big flock of black ducks as we started into the reeds. On

We decided that the next time the dog goes along we'll stay home.

BRITISH SECOND ARMY FORCES DRIVE FORWARD

Advance North of The Waal Branch of The Rhine River

GAIN TWO MILES

In Great Effort To Relieve Embattled Airborne Units
Locked in Grim Combat

(By International News Service)
Supreme Headquarters, A. E. F., Sept. 22—British Second Army armored and infantry forces drove forward north of the Waal branch of the Rhine River today to smash out gains of up to two miles in an effort to relieve embattled airborne units locked in grim combat with Nazi Elite Guard forces in the Arnhem area.

General Eisenhower's headquarters said German resistance to the Allied advance northward after seizure of the steel and concrete bridge at Nijmegen, nine miles below Arnhem, was exceptionally heavy and stronger than Allied troops had met in the past.

The troops of the first airborne army in the Arnhem area, further reinforced by troops and supplies dropped in the past 24 hours, battled valiantly against the Germans. The corridor slashed through Holland northward from Eindhoven to north of Nijmegen now has been extended to a length of 40 miles and is 25 miles wide at its base, headquarters said.

"Dragon Seed" To Be Attraction at Grand

From the same studio that gave you "The Good Earth," "Mating on the Bounty," "Mrs. Miniver" and "Random Harvest" comes another outstanding film. This one is called "Dragon Seed" and it is based on the celebrated novel by Pearl Buck, author also of "The Good Earth."

It must be said immediately that "Dragon Seed" is a great picture, an outstanding production measured by any standards in the great tradition of Hollywood.

"Dragon Seed," which opens Sunday at the Grand Theatre, is a story of China and of the valiant Chinese people. It is a sweeping, epic story of their struggles against the marauding Japanese invaders.

It is also a story of love and devotion, with Katharine Hepburn, following her triumphs in "Woman of the Year" and "The Philadelphia Story," revealing her great versatility in the role of Jade. Walter Huston plays Ling Tan, head of the house of Ling, and other roles are dramatically and superbly played by such outstanding performers as Aline MacMahon, Akim Tamiroff, Turhan Bey, Hurd Hatfield and many, many others.

Filmed on the same grand scale as "The Good Earth," the present film is even more far-reaching and powerful in its effect. It has been magnificently directed by Jack Conway and Harold S. Bucquet and richly produced by Pandro S. Berman.

"Dragon Seed" is one of those pictures which comes along too seldom, a production that proves that Hollywood is capable of the greatest kind of art that is at once the greatest kind of entertainment. Every man, woman and child will find in "Dragon Seed" the picture about our Chinese friends and allies that he or she has been waiting for.

"Dragon Seed" is a "must see" picture

SWORDS FOR FARMS

Beating swords into plowshares after this war is going to be a far more complicated process than usual, but the plowshares fashioned from swords promise to be applicable to a wide variety of agricultural chores.

In going over the surplus materials that will be available, the Department of Agriculture believes that Army smoke generators for screening offensive and defensive maneuvers can be used for the volume spraying of in-secticides in days of peace, thus saving large crop areas.

In war, strips of metal grillwork are used for rapid construction of airfields. These could be placed on hillsides to conquer field erosion. In very cold climates the Army has been using specially designed machines to pre-heat engines. It is suggested these could be employed drying hay in barns when weather is too moist for field drying. These gadgets are in addition to the jeeps, light trucks and other machinery of war that might be turned over to agriculture. Why shouldn't tankdozers be applied to a variety of farm jobs, including contouring?

Some persons have advocated destroying the war surpluses so that factories can keep workers busy making more. But destruction of that which is usable is ever frowned upon by sane men.
Whatever the farmer can use out of the vast amount of machinery and goods produced to defeat Germany and Japan should be made available to him.

TO GERMANY'S VITALS

General Patton's Army seems to have encountered the toughest going in penetrating Germany, which may be attributable to the circumstances that Patton won the highest reputation as an offensive general in the French campaigns. The Germans may be concentrating unusually heavy forces to delay Patton.

But this is not the whole story. Patton is pointed toward a part of Germany that is vital to for even the shortest period of time. Two-thirds of all German coal supplies are in the Ruhr Basin, the Rhineland and the Saar-Basit. Patton's drive toward the Saar Basin may already have brought production there to a standstill. General Hodges, coming in through Aachen, also is in coal producing country. Beyond the two armies lies the Ruhr Basin which contains 60 per cent of German coal.

Having lost most of its oil supply, Germany cannot survive longer than a few days or weeks occupation of its sources of coal.
Possession by the Allies of Germany's coal resources would tie everything up in the Reich, with cold weather already on the scene.

"One thing certain is that a great many automobile tires have lasted longer than anybody believed possible.

No matter how cold the weather, the Germans will be sitting on a hot spot.

THOMAS E. DEWEY

Says:

"It would be a tragedy if after this war Americans returned from our armed forces and failed to find

Fruits of Full Employment

the freedom and opportunity for which they fought. This must be a land where every man and woman has a fair chance to work and get ahead. Never again must free Americans face the spectre of long-continued mass unemployment. We Republicans are agreed that full employment shall be a first objective of national policy. And by full employment I mean a real chance for every man and woman to earn a decent living."

"CALAMITY TOWN" by ELLERY QUEEN

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

"It's getting worse," reported Pat to Ellery. "Jim's drinking himself stupid. Even Lola can't do anything with him. Ellery, is it just that he's scared?"

"He's not scared at all. Goes deeper than funk, Patty. Hasn't he seen Nora yet?"

"He's ashamed to go near her.
Nora's threatening to get out of bed and go over there herself, only Dr.
Willoughby said if she did he'd send her to the hospital. I slept with her last night. She cried all night."

Ellery remarked glumly, "Nora still thinks he's innocent?"

"Of course. She wants him to fight back. She says if he'd only come over to see her, she knows she could persuade him to stand up and defend himself from these attacks.
Did you see what those reporters are writing about Jim now?"

"Yes," sighed Ellery.
"It's all Frank Lloyd's fault! Pop's so furious he says he'll never speak to Frank again."

"It's better to keep out of Lloyd's way," said Ellery with a frown.
"He's thoroughly aroused."

Then Pat burst out: "How can people be so mean? Mom's friends are all calling her any more, they're whispering ugly things behind her back, she's being snubbed by two of her organizations—even Clarice Martin's stopped calling!"

"The Judge's wife," murmured Ellery. "Which suggests another interesting problem. . . . Have you seen Carter Bradford lately?"

"No," answered Pat. Then the author-detective swiftly changed tack.
"Patty, what do you know about Roberta Roberts?"

"A good reporter, I'd say!"

"Strange what different conclusions she draws from the same facts. Did you see this?" Ellery showed Pat a Chicago newspaper, flipped back to Roberta's Column.
A paragraph had been ringed, and
Pat read it quickly:

"The longer I investigate this case, the surer I feel that James Haight is a misunderstood man, a martyr to what is at best a circumstantial case and a victim of mobism. The woman he is alleged by gossips to have tried to poison from the same facts. Did you see this?" Ellery

A paragraph had been ringed, and
Pat read it quickly:

"You can't just be around the house and let these people spit on you, Jim! See Nora. She'll give you strength, Jim. She's ill—don't you know that? Don't you care?"

Haight turned a tortured face to the wall. "Nora's in good hands, her father's taking care of her. And I've done her enough harm already.
Lemme alone!"

"But Nora believes in you."

"I'm not gonna see Nora till this is all over," he muttered. "Till I'm Jim Haight again in this town, not some hated hyena."

And not all of Roberta's prodding could rouse him.

When Roberta had gone, and Jim was alone, Ellery said to Lola Wright: "And what's your angle, my dear Spidey?"

"No angle. Somebody has to take care of Jim. I feed him and put him to bed."

"You haven't expressed any opinion, Lola."

"There's been too much expression of opinion," she retorted. "But if you want to know, I'm a professional underdog-lover. I see Jim suffering, and that's enough for me."

"Apparently it's enough for Roberta Roberts, too," mumbled Ellery.

"Miss Love-Conquers-All?" Lola shrugged. "If you ask me, that dame's on Jim's side so she can get in where the other reporters can't!"

Considering that Nora was riddled as a result of arsenic poisoning, that John F. was finding his cronies transferring their business to Hallam Luck's Public Trust Co., that Hermione was having the ladyfinger put on her, Pat was sticking close to Nora's bedside, and even Lola had been jolted out of her isolation—considering all this, it was wonderful how the Wrights kept bravely pretending, even among themselves, that nothing out of the ordinary had happened.

No one referred to Nora's condition except as an "illness." John F. talked business at his desk in his old dry way—if he attended far fewer board meetings it was because he was "tied up" . . . obviously; and the fact that he disappeared from the weekly luncheons of the Chamber of Commerce was excused on grounds of dyspepsia.

As for Jim—he was not mentioned at all.

But Hermione, after the first emotional storms, did some calking and sail patching. No one was going to run her out of town. And grimly she began to employ her telephone tact.

State Trooper Testifies In Arson Case Now On Trial

Jury of ten women and two men before Judge Calvin S. Boyer. Today marks the third day of the trial.

The last witness called Wednesday afternoon before adjournment was Trooper Harry Christ, of Doylestown, Deputy Fire Marshall of the Pennsylvania State Police. He was on the stand for about 30 minutes under direct examination conducted by District Attorney Edward G. Biester and then turned over to defense attorney, Thomas Ross, Doylestown, for cross-examination. Court adjourned at that point until this morning.

Trooper Christ testified that he talked with Mrs. Ellicott on February 15, after interviewing other people in the vicinity of the fire and Milford firemen on February 9.

Christ testified that he discussed with the defendant, her financial condition and that she said that no repairs had been made to the apartment property recently. She also stated that she had been to the Upper Black Eddy apartment house a week before the fire and that she then found the place in good condition and everything intact. She told Trooper Christ that no rubbish of any kind was in the place then.

"The defendant further told me," Trooper Christ testified, "that she had been made executor of her father's estate and that her share, $4,300, had been invested in a farm near Milford, N. J. with a Mr. McEntee; that she had borrowed some additional money from her son to help pay for the farm that she and McEntee bought for $12,000, and that she owed the Milford bank $1,200.

"Mrs. Ellicott further told me that her income consisted of $15 a month which she got as rent from another property at Upper Black Eddy near the scene of the fire, and $20 apiece per month from two places in New Jersey. She told me that her husband disappeared some years ago and that she had him declared dead.

"As to a jug containing a half-cup of kerosene, found in the apartment at the time of the first fire, Mrs. Ellicott could give no reason for it being there. She said there was nothing in the building when she last saw it a week before the fire, but that somebody might have broken into the place after that and left the jug there. She said no jug was in the building when she was there.

"The defendant told me she had increased her insurance on the apartment house, and I asked her why, and she told me that the place had been vacant and anything could happen, and that she valued the place at the amount of the insurance. She said that she held the building worth $4,000 and tried to sell it for that, and to two other parties for $3,500.

"Mrs. Ellicott told me that she talked with her brother, Frank Shoudt on October 18, 1943, and on February 11, 1944, about this particular fire.

At this point District Attorney Biester turned the witness over for cross-examination and court adjourned until yesterday.

Other witnesses included John C.

Cereal Menus and Combinations

By BETTY BARCLAY

More and more, in the home, on the train, at the club or in a cool hotel dining room, men and women are ordering cereal and fruit combinations for breakfast and lunch.

It's much different than in the old days when a bowl of cereal and cream at breakfast was about all the cereal we consumed that day. Now, we know cereals have much to offer — those with whole-grain nourishment are included in the Basic 7 — that daily pattern of basic foods for well-rounded meals. There are many delightful cereal combinations, that are a welcome change from our usual breakfast and luncheon menus.

Here are two cereal combinations for lunch — followed by two menus calling for the combinations given. These in turn are followed by two delicious and rather unusual recipes showing how cereals fit into daily menus, in other ways as well as at breakfast-time. For something new, try them and these delightful, healthful and satisfactory menus.

Cereal Combinations for Lunch
Grape-Nuts with Sliced Peaches, Strawberries and Blueberries

Milk or Cream
Beverage

Menu No. 2

Hot or Jellied Consomme
Cereal Medley
(Corn Flakes, Wheat Flakes, and Bran Flakes) with Raspberries
Milk or Cream
Cheese and Crackers
Beverage
Scrambled Eggs with Toasts
3 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
6 tablespoons milk or water
½ cup Post Toasties, crushed
Beat eggs slightly, add salt, pepper, and milk, and mix well. Pour into greased skillet and cook slowly, stirring regularly across bottom of pan, until creamy. Add cereal and serve at once. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

Blueberry Bran Muffins
¾ cup milk
1 cup 40% Bran Flakes
1 cup sifted flour
¾ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, well beaten
3 tablespoons melted butter or other shortening
¾ cup blueberries

Pour milk over bran, let stand 5 minutes. Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and sugar, and sift again. Add egg and shortening to bran mixture and mix well. Add flour, beating only enough to dampen all flour. Fold in blueberries. Bake in greased muffin pans in hot oven (425° F.) 25 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

Ellicott's insurance policy on her Upper Black Eddy building showing that she had on Feb. 6, 1944, insurance amounting to $6200, of which $5,000 was on the apartment house and $1200 on the garage (which did not burn). Grier stated that on August 16, 1943, the defendant carried on the same property $3,000 on the apartment house and $1200 on the garage. He testified that the increase on the apartment building was made on Oct. 22, 1943, and that a vacancy clause on the building was in force in 1943 and had been renewed for a period of six months. A motion by defense counsel that Grier's testimony be ruled out was denied by Judge Boyer.

Mrs. Emma Mathis, Upper Black Eddy, a teacher in the Deep Run school in Bedminster township, testified that she lived in No. 1 apartment in the defendant's building from Nov. 12, 1942, to May 11, 1943. She described the place in detail, reciting the lack of conveniences—cold water only, no stove, an electric pump that worked only 50 per cent of the time for pumping water. Mrs. Mathis stated that no arrangement was made for heating the apartment and that she had to bring her own stove. There were no toilets in the apartments, the witness stated; the toilets were in the outside garage. Mrs. Mathis testified that she paid $15 per month rent to the defendant.

Frank Jesolitski, of Upper Black Eddy, also testified that he lived in one of the other apartments in the defendant's building for about 10 months. He corroborated the previous witness concerning the lack of conveniences. He stated that he used a 6-room coal heater in his apartment and could not keep his family warm. He paid $15 a month rent.

Authorization was given the shade tree commission to spend up to $500 planting new trees and removing dead wood.

Charles Young, chairman of the water works committee, reported tests for August were satisfactory. A communication from the State Highway Department informed the board that removal of the old trolley car rails on North Pennsylvania avenue could not be done at State expense.

campaign ribbons to his credit, he's logged many a sea-mile, but would like to get back to Bristol and settle down again.

However, until the war is won, he'll continue to do his part as a fighting bluejacket in Uncle Sam's Navy—one of the Bristol McCahan's who are really doing their part for their country.

The other members of the McCahan family in addition to William, who are in the service, include the following: Cpl. John, who is in Italy and with the Army's anti-aircraft unit; Sgt. Henry, a paratrooper now in Georgia; Joseph is a pay clerk in the Navy and is stationed at Seattle, while Elizabeth is a petty officer, third class, in the WAVES and is at Indianhead, Md.

Mrs. McCahan is employed in war work at Rohm & Haas, while Mr. McCahan is employed at the Warner Sand Company near Morrisville, much of whose product contributes indirectly to the war effort. This gives this family a 100% war effort record.

may be but a few months or possibly a year. The two will reside at the school dormitories.

The Rev. Mr. Knetter will serve as pastor-evangelist in a section of western China, he being assigned upon arrival there as a district superintendent with 50 churches under his care. He will remain at each church for a period of two or three weeks at a time, helping to set up organization activities and Christian programs. The churches cover an area of about 400 miles. En route from one parish to another he will preach and endeavor to set up new Christian groups between the churches already established. Most of the travel will be by foot, or by donkey and bicycle.

The local clergyman served as pastor of the Methodist Church at Evansburg for two years prior to coming to Bristol. He is a graduate of Central high school, Philadelphia; Ursinus College, Collegeville; and has followed several years of study at the University of Pennsylvania in preparation for his life work. He graduated last May from Drew Theological Seminary.

witness until she was out of the room.

Among the character witnesses testifying for Mrs. Yorstson were Mrs. Evelyn Parker, Mrs. Jane Geiges, Paul Roeger and Max Roeger, all of Andalusia.

In sentencing Mrs. Yorstson, Judge Keller told her that he was giving her the benefit of having pleaded guilty and that he was taking into consideration her daughter and little granddaughter as well as the good reputation that she had held in the opinion of her acquaintances. The Judge laid particular stress on the situation existing today among the young wives of men in the armed services.

"There is a slang word for it," stated Judge Keller, "that exactly fits the situation, and that word is 'cheaters.' It is hard to have any sympathy with a 'cheater,' whether man or woman."

Mrs. Yorstson was sentenced to an indeterminate term in the State Industrial Home for Women at Muncie.

HIGH SCHOOL COACH UNDECIDED AS TO LINEUP TONIGHT

Coach Stackhouse Sure Embessi Will Start at Right End

FARELL IS AT RIGHT

Feole and Lelinski, Tackles;
Oriola and McDevitt

Coach Harold L. Stackhouse who leads his Bristol High Bunnies against Trenton Catholic High tonight at Dunn Field, Trenton, is still undecided on whom to use in certain positions.

He is sure that Embessi will start at right end, while left end is a choice between Keyes or Favoroso. His tackles will be Feole and Lelinski, and the guards, Monachello and Costantini. "Mickey" Mandoli will draw the nod for the center post.

Farrell is almost a certainty at right half, while left half is a toss-up between Oriola and McDevitt. At quarterback it will be either Fosse, Accardi or Capriotti. Coach Stackhouse has converted John Schenke from a lineman to a back, and will start him at the fullback position.

Sportsmen's Briefs

BY JOE ELBERSON

Last fishing contest this year... it is Sunday, September 24th, the Little Fish & Game Protective Association will hold its annual youth fishing contest at Silver Lake. The contest will be open to everyone holding a Pennsylvania resident fishing license.

First prize is a five dollar sporting goods order. All catches will be eligible for entry except carp. The entire lake will be open for contestants. Members of the Association Fish Committee will conduct the contest which starts at 7 in the morning and ends at 9 in the evening. Last year, when the contest attracted almost two hundred participants, the contest was won by Harry Bossler with his bass entry.

Corporal Johnny Johnson, home on furlough from a South Carolina Army Camp, couldn't resist visiting one of his old fishing stretches, the Canal. He and some friends were working a section in Grady's Park Sunday evening. Claimed they were after a big bass which they had seen earlier in the day. Not having heard to the contrary I am inclined to believe the big fellow is still free in his native haunts!

Better late than never... the weed cutting program at Silver Lake has been completed once again. Next year we hope the Fish Commission is successful in having the job done twice during the season. This will keep the growth from making the grounds look like a wilderness.

A fine catch... Joe Smith, Locust street, one of Bristol's most persistent fishermen, took 11 pickerel from the Canal one day last week. He used a spoon on his bait casting rod. Most of the fish ran about 14 inches, all-

DURABLE DUBIEL - - - By Jack Sords

WALTER DUBIEL, STURDY NEW YORK YANKEE ROOKIE PITCHER, ON THE UPGRADE IN THE WIN COLUMN

though he landed one 18-incher which he kept.

Rail bird hunting still good... Maurice Delker and I hunted in the Florence Island section of the Delaware last Saturday afternoon. We had a bag of 15 birds, including two king rails. Met two other parties returning from the same section. One had 39 birds and the other 21. It was a very pleasant afternoon, warm enough to hunt in our shirt sleeves and do a little wading where we couldn't pole our boat. George Wetherill and I were up at the same spot Tuesday evening. Had about a half hour of shooting. Bagged eight in that time. George made a beautiful double shot, the birds dropping on open water about a foot apart. Flushed a big flock of black ducks as we started into the reeds. On Wednesday evening Ralph Ratcliffe and I got another eight. I did more missing than hitting. We flushed more than a score of birds. Had a dog along with us. Hoped he would retrieve but we spent most of the time retrieving him from the water... by the time we were ready to start down river we had about four inches of water in the boat. We decided that the next time the dog goes along we'll stay home.
